

Are you finding it hard to buy or get hold of products for your period?

I'm Sara De Benedictis and I work at Brunel University London. I'd like to talk to people in the UK who have been unable to regularly buy or get hold of products for their period.

If this is something you're experiencing or have experienced and you are between 12-51 years old, I'm interested in listening to your story and hearing about how this issue is shaping your life.

You can fill out a questionnaire online (<https://brunel.onlinesurveys.ac.uk/the-period-poverty-project-2019>) or contact me to get a hard copy with a freepost envelope.

Any responses would be voluntary, confidential and anonymous.

If you are interested or would like more info, please get in touch by email (sara.debenedictis@brunel.ac.uk) or phone (01895 265662).

This study has been approved by the College of Business, Arts and Social Sciences Research Ethics Committee.

